

After experiencing the joy of satellite radio, I am appalled at major broadcasters throwing their wealth, and power around Washington trying to collapse a new more creative entity. Their behavior is outrageous, and shameful. If XM, and other satellite services are restricted as to what they can broadcast, well then we have a monopoly! As a paying consumer, I think we (the consumers) should have the last say as to what we can, and want to listen to. Especially in our autos. I'm personally tired of listening to DJ's and their horrible rhetorics, and their own selfish opinions. This is why I subscribe to XM in my car each month! It is no different than cable tv, and CNN. Is the FCC going to tell CNN what they can and cannot report over cable tv? If I want instant weather, and traffic, I don't think I should have to wait for it. If I want it now, it should be at my disposal! Not when the radio channel wants to broadcast it.
